Introduction. The term performative has since been expanded and applied in various fields, including communication, education, and social sciences, to describe actions, behaviors, or approaches that emphasize performance as a means of expression or achieving an outcome. Here's how it is used in different contexts:

1. In Communication:

Performative Communication focuses on the act of speaking or writing as a performance that achieves a specific effect. For example:

In oral communication, the tone, gestures, and delivery matter as much as the words themselves.

In written communication, style, structure, and word choice contribute to the “performative” aspect by influencing how the message is received.

2. In Education:

A performative approach to teaching emphasizes active engagement, role-playing, and participation. It involves students performing tasks or roles to deepen understanding and build skills.

For example, debates, presentations, and collaborative projects use performative elements to enhance learning outcomes.

3. In Developing Competence (e.g., Collaborative Competence):

Performative approaches in teamwork or collaboration emphasize the act of doing—such as negotiating, problem-solving, or applying agreed-upon rules—as a way to build skills and competence.

In the context of your earlier sentences, this may mean using oral and written communication as tools for actively engaging in teamwork, setting group norms, and building collaborative skills.

4. In Social Sciences:

Judith Butler, a prominent gender theorist, used the term performative in her work to explain how identity (e.g., gender) is not something inherent but is instead performed through repeated behaviors and social practices.

The performative approach in the women's system is important. The term “Performative” was proposed by an English philosopher, logic had submitted the instructions. Performative approach, performing, execution, execution, action, and words “Performative approach or statements”, clear action, this is not just to talk about the fact that J. Austin executed and talks.

At the same time, activists of the women's system also pay accuracy and prosecution in the task, and the talked, and the current situation became unexpected.

The concepts of performance and implementation in the scientific talk is the concept of “linguistic performance” with the term “Performative” actively used in theories of language and semiotic theories of language and semiotic. The concept of “Tiles” and “Linguist Scientist), as the concept between the concepts of the linguist and” speech “is presented as the relationship between the structure and communications, and the concept of” competency “is also the same way in this place. GRI is required to be used. Khomsky brings the main difference in the work of “Language and Thinking”¹:

1. Compectivity (knowledge of one's own language), 2. The speaker is a listener and the user in specific use of language.

Performative approach can only be considered as a description of the legislature not only as a description of the content, can also be studied as symptoms, symbols, images, but as clearly material movement.

The performative approach will allow cultural events not only as a description of cultural events, but also characters, characters, symbols, but as clear material movement. Components determined for similar actions are force and success (depicted and concept in the theory of speech).

In recent years, the perception of performative for cultural and social sciences is becoming increasingly important. Only, according to the scholars, the performative approach is to have the opportunity to connect various disciplinary approaches to the problems of social reality. The issue of the implementation of the implementation of social movements, as well as the issue of the implementation of social developed emblems and knowledge, is not only of great importance for cultural studies, but also a practical feature as a guide to the actions of various individuals. This position comes out when it comes to the study of modern communication. For example, the Sociological Concept of De² bord is based on the definition of modern society “Vice society”. In his opinion, the peculiarity of society is that there is no truth, reality, but no, show policies, reigns reigned. (De Bord 1967).

processes and reflects the evolution in the field of executive, which no longer limits itself to certain types of speech actions. The text is included in the speech, speech and mental gaps. At the same time, it is important to create a relationship, target and gunshame in each field, on each field that connect the activities of women, on each field.

It is known that all society's families are always made of men and women. Their right and work on top of each other also serves as serving their relationship as they are enriching.

The place in the woman in the family and women's society is not limited to doing daily household chores. Often women make thinking, resolving disputes, assessment of conflicts, and developing family interaction methods. This is usually a quality better life, reflecting the women of his family, are virtues of peace and enrichment.

Women are very important for women to receive open help necessary at the same time in all spheres of life. In the past, parents have prepared girls for family life: for them it is said that it is important for them to have traditions, family holidays and family hierarchies. Today, the prospects for education and professional training of girls and young women are very good. Failure to see the meaning of life, not to be afraid to break down, wonderful family life and only take into account equity is a great achievement for family life. It is evidenced by the fact that the role, cooperation and importance of employees of the Family and Women's Employees in women's lives in women's lives is invaluable. B. D. Turniyozova write very important information: modern linguistics, the field that studies such constructions as the performative verb, performative speech and performative linguistic status of performativity, which studies the formation of linguistic elements in communication.

However, we believe that performativity, based only on this formula, limits its object of study³.

While the field of linguistics is progressing along the world sciences, performative linguistics is also establishing a research center like its other types of prospects such as descriptive, generative and cognitive linguistics. Performative linguistics enriches the process of describing the language.
